

Cookie Policy

Blackthorne's website and online services, along with most other websites, use cookies and similar technologies. For the purpose of this policy, 'cookies' and 'similar technologies' will be referred to collectively as 'cookies'.

What are cookies?

Cookies are small text files containing pieces of information that websites can store on your computer's hard disk. Cookies enable users to navigate around the website and (where appropriate) allow Blackthorne to continually improve the website and make it more efficient to use on future visits.

Blackthorne use two types of cookies on this website:

- Session cookies are temporary cookies that remain on your machine only for as long as you are on the website and are deleted after each visit.
- Persistent cookies which remain on your machine until expiry or deletion (many of these have automatic deletion dates). Persistent cookies may store your personal preferences, for example your language preferences on multi-lingual sites. They may also be used to record activity you may have previously completed, such as completing an online survey, so that you are not asked to complete the survey every time you use the site.

How we use cookies on our website

Blackthorne use some 'strictly necessary' cookies within these online services. These are limited to those deemed essential to provide you with the services you have requested, and therefore must be allowed to continue with that service.

In addition, Blackthorne uses cookies to:

Collect anonymous information that will help the firm understand visitor browsing habits on this website; compile statistical reports on website activity, e.g. number of visitors and the pages they visit; in some cases, remember information about you when you visit our site. Blackthorne may need to do this to provide some of our services. Blackthorne sometimes use third parties to assist the firm in the analysis of visits to and performance of our website, but no personal information is collected and no personal information is sent to the third parties for this purpose.

Blackthorne do not use cookies to track your use of the internet after you leave our site, nor do we use them to store any personal information in them that others could read and understand.

Changing your cookie settings

You can block any cookies from any website through your browser settings. For more specific information about how to do this and how to manage cookies to suit your preferences, including deleting those that have already been added to your computer, please visit www.aboutcookies.org.

If you share the use of a computer, accepting or rejecting the use of cookies will affect all users of that computer.

Consent to cookies

If you continue to use this site without disabling cookies we will take that as your consent for us to place cookies on your computer. Please remember if you do disable cookies then some parts of our website may not work properly and you will not be able to use some of Blackthorne's services.
